NIBBLEDISH CONTRIBUTOR

Ingredients

400grams beef strips Bunch of Chinese broccoli 1 Medium Onion - chopped into wedges 1 Medium Carrot - halved and then slices tbsp finely chopped garlic & ginger 4 birds eye red chillies finely chopped MARINADE FOR BEEF(About a tbsp of each) dark soy sauce oyster sauce fish sauce black pepper sauce Kecap manis minced garlic grinded black pepper Sugar Corn starch and water to thicken stirfry

Instructions

This was my attempt to do black bean beef stirfry, however I did not have black bean sauce in my cupboard so I used black pepper sauce. I love eating this at the Chinese restaurants however they only use Chinese broccoli and beef, in my mutated version I added carrots. Like many asian/stirfry dishes, ingredients should be chopped, sliced, diced and blanched in advance. So make sure you have all the ingredient in hand, ready for the wok 1. In a bowl combine beef strips and marinade and mix together so beef is well coated and leave in fridge to marinade for about 20-30 minutes. 2. Boil a pot of water on stove for blanching the Chinese broccoli and carrots. Extract the stems of the Chinese broccoli from the leaves and before throwing the stems in the pot of boiling water, add tbsp of oil into the pot, this will help give the broccoli glistening effect. The Chinese broccoli only needs 30-40 seconds max, then take them out and strain them, then chuck in the sliced carrots for about 20 secs and then strain them as well 3. Replace pot with wok and add some vegetable oil and let the wok heat up, then throw in the garlic. Let that sizzle for a few seconds before adding the broccoli stems and stir it so it coated with garlic and oil, then add the leaves, stirfry until the leaves have wilted, then transfer the Chinese broccoli on a large plate, creating a bed. 4. Place wok back on the heat and add a few tbsp's of oil and add garlic and chillies. Then throw in onions and cook them for about 2 minutes (you still want them to be firm and they shouldn't be too soft), then add the beef marinade and stir make sure the meat is evenly cooked through. At this point you can put some more cracked black pepper - I like to because it gives the dish a bit more kick. Finally add the carrots and the corn starch mixture to thicken the stirfry. Once the stirfry has thickened, ladle it on top of the Chinese broccoli. Serve with some Jasmine rice. Serves - 6-8 people.
