Instructions

This soup is so easy-peasy to make. I guarantee you a lot of the ingredients needed here are in your pantry! You can easily substitute stuff like chicken broth for vegetable broth, to make it more vegetarian-friendly.

1. In a food processor, take your cubed tomatoes and process it till it's a nice puree.
2. In a pot, add the olive oil and add the garlic, onion and celery. Stir fry till it smells nice, lol. Or when it's ready, at least.
3. Add chicken broth, milk, salt and pepper. Simmer a bit.
4. Add tomato paste and tomato puree. Add more S&P to your taste.
5. When it's at a boil, add your butter. Simmer it slightly.
6. Stirring, slowly add the flour to thicken it up. Add your parsley and parmasean cheese.
7. In a separate pan, heat it up and butter up your two slices of bread. Put cheese and ham and wait till the cheese becomes melty.
8. When cheese shows signs of melting, put bread on top and flip over until both sides are nicely browned.
9. Serve.
